PREFATORY NOTE.

IT is a gratifying circumstance that the interest among American collectors in ancient coins has for some years been noticeably increasing. The mintages of Greece and of those kindred peoples which, from their vicinity to the Peloponnesus, felt most deeply the inspiration of Greek culture, are by the consensus of all students, acknowledged to be the purest sources of numismatic art, which in the golden age of Athens and her sister cities reached its highest development. To aid in promoting this interest, we have sought to give those who desire to enrich their cabinets with specimens of these coins of unquestioned genuineness, an opportunity such as has seldom before been enjoyed by American buyers. In the following pages we offer some of the choicest gems of the period from about 420 to 280, B. C., in which the supremacy of the art of the Greek capital, and of Ephesus and Clazomenae in the Ionian peninsula, were at the zenith of their fame. Beside these, in interesting contrast, will be found on the one hand. issues struck when Art was in her infancy, with others of later ages, coined when the sceptre had fallen from her hand, and her power had well nigh departed.

The symbolism of these coins, which Carlyle calls "strange face-to-face vestiges of vanished aeons," of itself affords material for profound study: the bee on Ephesian coins (for instance, No. 127) typifies the tradition that "when the Athenians led their colony to found the city of Ephesus, the Muses, in the form of bees, flew before them, to guide their fleet." But a prefatory note is not the place to discuss the beauties, artistic and mythologic, of these attractive pieces. They are here to tell their own story, and to bring the student into closer contact with the past than the most elaborate histories can possibly do.

With the Greek coins will be found a large variety of the best as well as some of the more familiar issues of the Roman Mint-masters, struck at a time when the die-sinkers were depicting on coins those graceful allusions to the brilliant exploits of unforgotten heroes, or were flattering the vanity of their patrons by attributing a divine ancestry to the founders of their families. On No. 443, for example, Venus Genetrix in a biga, alludes to the well-known tradition of the Julian gens, which claimed direct descent from that goddess. On No. 440 we see perpetuated the story of the famous exploit of Caius Numonius Valla, who single-handed fought his way into the entrenched camp of the enemy: — a type which was "restored" by the Emperor Trajan, as an historic record.

These brief allusions, all for which we can find space, afford only glimpses of the riches offered to Numismatic students in this Catalogue. And those we have mentioned are by no means the most valuable or attractive in its pages. We confidently claim that seldom if ever before has so rich and varied a collection, or one of the class that would compare with it in extent, been placed in an American Auction room.

A few points of interest to collectors may be mentioned concerning this Catalogue. It will be noticed that in all cases where it was possible, in giving the legends on Greek coins, we have shown the peculiar form of letters, using for this purpose, for the first time in any Coin Catalogue, "Inscription Greek" capitals, a face recently cut to imitate the characters as engraved on tablets, etc. While it is not claimed that this type conforms in all cases strictly to the shapes of the letters as found on the coins, it represents their peculiarities more closely than anything heretofore used. Copious references to standard authorities are given, both for purposes of identification and for values; so that the latter are not our estimates of the worth of the pieces, but of the ablest experts in ancient coins abroad.

With this statement it is unnecessary to mention in detail the more valuable pieces; we content ourselves with calling attention to a very few. The fine and extremely rare Stater of Itanus, (No. 114) which is not mentioned by Poole, and the very rare Cilician Stater (No. 921), will no doubt at once attract the notice of collectors. Among Greek Imperials those of Poppaea, Antinous, Zenobia, and Otho, will surely not be overlooked; while a glance at the Denarii of the Roman Republic will reveal various rarities, like Nos. 404, 412, 414, 441, and many more. In the Roman Imperial Silver the collection is very rich: — for instance the Denarii of Pompey, 462, Marciana, 493, Matidia, 494, Didius Julianus, 520, and Pescennius, 521, may be noted. The sale closes with a collection of rare Numismatic Works, among which we mention Mionnet, Eckhel, Leake, Carelli, Borghesi, Cohen, Sabatier, and Müller.

In conclusion we desire to state that we have endeavored to make a thoroughly impartial rating of the condition of the pieces, and can assure the patrons of this sale that their purchases will be found in every instance to conform exactly to the catalogue descriptions.

Becker Fabrications.

Carl Wilhelm Becker was born in Speyer, in 1771, and began his business career in Manheim as a goldsmith, in 1806. A lover and student of antiquities, and as his productions show, an artist and engraver of high degree, he early began the cutting of dies, copying after the rarer types of Greek and Roman gold and silver coins, and striking pieces therefrom, making large and continuous sales through Frankfort merchants, presumably, dealers in antiquities. It is not believed that he had any assistance whatever in any part of this work. By original methods an appearance of age was imparted to his bright and newly struck pieces, which were even given an odor. Common or worn specimens of genuine coins supplied antique planchets to receive the impressions of his dies, and added to their appearance of genuineness. The total number of his fabrications is about 331. It has been too common an error of late, to call all manner of copies and counterfeits "Becker's," while the pieces in the metals he personally issued are rarely met with. Those which are seen, are generally in lead, or copper, or silver casts. The dies are still in existence and have been offered for sale within the past five years. It is not thought however, that they have been used on any but soft metal since Becker's time. Exposed by Sestini and others, he afterwards continued the manufacture and sale of these pieces with true representations. —— B. in this series, refers to Pinder's "Beckerschen Falschen Münzen."
